PORCUPINE CANNIBALISM.
No Solution for Cops in Northern Ontario.

Montreal, Mar. 28.—This mystery case surrounding the case this winter in the wilderness of the two bodies of the Porcupine cannibalism has not yet been cleared up, according to L. O. Armstrong, of the C.P.R., who has just returned from a trip in the north.

He said I could neither there, there is not the slightest doubt that cannibalism did occur, he said. "It is a matter of common talk among the people in the north that they did not come across anyone who saw the mutilated corpse, but who said that certain photographs were taken of the remains. The investigations into the matter, he added, were still proceeding.

This, said Mr. Armstrong, was the second case of cannibalism which was known to have occurred in the north during the past two years, and he thought it was high time the police was educated as to the edible roots, bark and fungus which will preserve life in the wilderness when the ordinary food supplies are cut off.

He had sent a collection of such edible to the Forest Party in New York, and intended to make it a feature of sporting exhibits in the future. The collection comprised the following: Labrador tea, which grows in the form of small bushes, and is suitable for tea; rock tripe, a fungus like a piece of old rubber sole; and hairy mushrooms; and caribou—there are two kinds, one poisonous and the other edible; the roots of the yellow water lily, which are bitter but nourishing; caribou lichen; silver moss, which grows on rocks, and is from south of the Arctic; wild berries; wild rose; the roots of ferns and bracken; and kind of grass; the inside bark of white birch, poplar, jackpine, willow, aspen, cherry, tamarac, mountain ash, and slippery elm.

By a knowledge of such things as these, Mr. Armstrong says, a traveler can support life anywhere in the northern wilderness at any time of the year.

Montreal, Mar. 28.—That two of the eight named in Justice Cannon's report for malversation could be convicted in the courts, was the opinion of the city attorney's handed in by the city.

EARLIEST ACCOUNT OF DELUGE.

Table Discovered by a Pennsylvania University Professor.

Philadelphia, March 26.—Professor Herman V. Hilgert, of the University of Pennsylvania, whose researches at Babylon and Nippur were the subject of attack by the Rev. Dr. John A. Peters of New York, but who was vindicated by the university, has just discovered the fragment of a tablet bearing an account of the deluge. The tablet was found in 1890 in the lowest strata of the oldest part of the ruins of the temple library at Nippur. It is a fragment of a tablet measuring 2 1/2 inches at its greatest width and 2 1/2 inches at its greatest length. Professor Hilgert has just made public his translation.

"I declare upon oath that the contents of Heaven I will loosen, a deluge I will make and it shall sweep away all men together; but thou (the Babylonian Noah) seek life before the deluge cometh forth; for to all living beings, as many as there are, I will bring overthrow, destruction, annihilation. Build a great ship and make height shall be its structure. It shall be a house boat carrying what has been saved of life.

With a strong deck cover it. The ship which thou shalt make into it, bring the beasts of the field, the birds of the heavens and the creeping things, two of everything instead of a number."

The Semitic dialect inscription and certain grammatical peculiarities of the text above, according to Professor Hilgert, that it was written between 2157 and 2003 B.C. The King James version of the Bible gives the date of the flood as 2445 B.C. The oldest tablet heretofore known containing an account of the flood was the Layard tablet of 2300 B.C., now in the British Museum.

The Layard tablet was a pagan story of a deluge brought about at a council of the gods, who decided to destroy mankind. One of the gods was moved to say his prayer—the Noah of the story—and sent a dream of warning.

TO STOP HORSE RACING.

Bylaw Passed by Oak Bay Council Will Do It.

Victoria, B.C., March 23.—Racetrack gamblers at Victoria, who, with their famous sixty-day meet, brought the Oak Bay suburb of Victoria into disrepute last year to such an extent that the mayor was obliged to go on the floor of parliament during the debate on the bill to prohibit betting at races, will never do it again. Any person carrying on or holding any horse racing, entering a race-horse in, or aiding, judging, starting, driving or riding in any horse race held within the limits of the municipality of the district of Oak Bay after the date on which this bylaw shall come into effect shall be liable on summary conviction to a penalty of not less than fifty dollars and not more than five hundred dollars for each offence.
